Bike Builders Cory Ness, Rick Fairless and Brian Klock Appearing at J&P Open House

ANAMOSA, Iowa – WOW!! That is the best word to describe the two-day 30th anniversary bonanza planned for Saturday and Sunday, June 27-28 at J&P Cycles®, outside Anamosa, Iowa.

In a town with a population of roughly 5,000 people, it's not common to hold an event with attendance numbers close to or exceeding 15,000 people. Last year's one day J&P Cycles® Annual Open House did just that. For that reason, the 30th Anniversary celebration has been stretched into a two-day extravaganza complete with more entertainment, more events and more fun!

One of the highlights of this Open House is sure to be the motorcycle builders who will be in attendance. Not one or two, but THREE well known bike builders will be in Anamosa at J&P during this event. Cory Ness, Rick Fairless and Brian Klock will all be onsite, all weekend long, answering your questions, posing for photos and signing autographs.

Rick Fairless

19, he went to work at his uncle's paint store, working his way up the ladder. After growing tired of the paint business, he decided to go after his love of motorcycles and in 1996 opened an Easyriders franchise in Dallas. Today, Fairless runs Stokers Dallas, which sells Big Bear, Big Dog and Victory motorcycles and builds customs as well. Rick became even more well known when his business became the setting for the SPEED show, Texas Hardtails in 2005.

Brian Klock found success in South Dakota with a full-time shop that builds various custom motorcycles. Open since 1997, Brian has found his niche with Klock Werks, building bikes and working with his line of custom parts, including bag fillers, bagger dashes, handlebars, speaker grilles, windshields and more. His wife, Laura, is by his side in business, serving as vice-president at Klock Werks. She also isn't afraid to ride! Laura piloted the World's Fastest Bagger to an AMA National Land Speed Record in 1996. The

Cory Ness

Cory Ness, son of famed bike builder Arlen Ness, has been a part of the bike building industry basically since birth. Now, as the chief designer behind Arlen Ness Enterprises, Cory is the president, running the day-to-day operations, designing new parts and accessories and still finding time to design his own bikes. Many of Cory's personal creations have appeared on the covers and inside spreads of motorcycle magazines around the world.

Rick Fairless began his love interest with motorcycles at an early age. At
